INTERVIEW WITH CPT JEFF EMERY

Bibliogov, United States, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 246 x 189 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.The leader of 1st Platoon, Alpha Company, Task Force 2-2 Infantry during Operation Phantom Fury (Al Fajr), Captain Jeff Emery was in charge of four Bradleys, two tanks and two dismounted squads during this decisive November 2004 urban fight to retake the Iraqi city of Fallujah and, in this interview, discusses the role his unit played in its successful prosecution. At the time Alpha Company's senior platoon leader, of particular note is how the duties of Emery himself changed upon the company losing not only its executive officer (First Lieutenant Edward Iwan) but its commander (Captain Sean Sims) as well - tragic events and difficult, at times confusing, circumstances which he discusses in great detail. Describing the plan as simply, Start in the north and attack south until you run out of city Emery credits the leaders of this fight who had to make on-the-spot decisions every day that eventually led to the final outcome of the battle. Most of all, though, Emery praises the soldiers who did everything they were told: kicked in every door, searched every little dark corner. The platoon and squad leaders really had to make those decisions about what was going to get a guy hurt, what was going to get someone killed, and what will keep them safe and still get the mission done. The guys on the ground almost did it flawless. In a battle like Fallujah or any time it's a house-to-house dismounted street fight Emery added, you really have to give the credit to the guys on the ground the whole fight, because they're the ones who are really taking the brunt of it.
