Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: LAP Lambert Academic Publishing | When we were to choose a topic among various options, we chose to work on something related to automobiles - a diverse area of mechanical engineering. In order to work & study on the engine of the given car (1999 Toyota Echo Sedan), we had to dismantle the car first. Then we had to dismantle the engine. The engine - a 2NZ-FE engine is a VVT-i (Variable Valve Timing with Intelligence) engine. Afterwards we had to make a cut-model of the engine by cutting various dismantled parts & assembling the cut parts. Finally we re-assembled the given car without the engine. In the process we gained a lot of practical knowledge about the VVT-i engine parts. The cut-model we made can be utilized further in future to educate students. Future thesis students can also work with it by adding up transmission system, cooling system, air-conditioning system, lubrications system etc. Mechatronics devices can also be added up to give autonomous programming, such as - self-drive, avoiding obstacles or follow leading car etc. | Format: Paperback | Language/Sprache: english | 88 pp.
