Excerpt: . an escape valve, pressure gauge, and steam trap. The condensation water is withdrawn by means of a separate steam trap from each pan coil. The vacuum pumping engine is of unusually large capacity, to insure the maintenance of a very high vacuum and consequent efficiency of the pan. This vacuum pumping engine is especially designed to avoid several of the disadvantages inherent in most of these engines; the heavy flywheel is entirely carried between the bearings and the pump ram, and the steam piston is directly connected with-. out the intervention of link work. The whole pump occupies very little of the usually valuable floor space, and all parts are easily accessible for examination and repairs. The pump is of the floating-arm-displacement type, with suction and delivery valves of very large area, and is so arranged that all the valves, grids, and guards can be withdrawn and replaced in short order. 47. Fig. 8 represents a perspective view and Fig. 9 a section of this form of evaporating pan. The boiling pan 5 consists of air-tight hemispheres surmounted by a funnel connected with a tube l that leads to a condenser A. The apparatus is supplied with steam by the pipes r, s, the steam circulating in the boiling pan by means of a pipe g. By. opening a lever valvef, the juice can be run, by means of the pipe a, into the pan 17, when the pan, after continually boiling, requires..
