Excerpt: . twelve made their appearance in court with a verdict which every man among them knew to be a false one. (7 Loud. Law Mag., 49.) With regard to the impression we have given of the value of a trial before a competent judge who shall have a jury in his brain and not as a team, we may here add that the editor of Finch s Reports was somewhat of our way of thinking, for he attempts to prove how a single judge, --say a chancellor--is of more value than twelve good men and true. Tis true, says he, many decrees of lord chancellors have been reversed upon appeals to a superior court, but never for any reason like that for which a verdict was set aside which was given by a north county jury by flipping up a sixpence--if cross, for...
