Metabolism is an old general name for all the chemical changes in a living organism. The constructive phases of nutrition are often summed up in the term anabolism or constructive metabolism; the destructive phases as catabolism or destructive metabolism. In the former the processes tend to be synthetic; in the latter analytic. Having considered the synthetic processes, the analytic ones demand attention in the next chapter. CHAPTER IV.--DESTRUCTIVE METABOLISM i. RESPIRATION Respiratory organs.--The word respiration, or its English equivalent, breathing, suggests at once the currents of air into and out of the lungs, and the bodily movements that cause them. The reason for this is that so much attention has been given to these matters in human physiology that the more...
