Especially when it comes to her family s traditions-or coincidences as most people view them. Like her mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother before her, Jo is the oldest of three daughters and one day will inherit the Triple Bar Ranch. She is determined to marry a local boy the summer she turns twenty-five to keep another tradition going. But when mysterious inconsistencies arise concerning her fiance s actions, Jo turns to her new friend for comfort, a local National Park ranger who hails from back east. Will she be able to let go of her fetish for tradition before it s too late, open her eyes, and recognize the man who can actually help run her struggling ranch-and who truly loves her?.
